Skin: Wear mineral oil resistant gloves and protective overalls and boots.

Inhalation: Ensure adequate ventilation or local exhaust measures. Respiratory equipment is not normally required, however suitable respiratory equipment may be required for those operations that generate fumes and mists that cannot be controlled by local ventilation, use mask type FFP2 or FFP3 giving protection against water and oil based mists.

9. PHYSICAL AND CHEMICAL PROPERTIES

Physical State	Dark Straw Coloured Liquid
Odour	Mild/Oily
Specific Gravity @ 20°C	0.888
Kinematic Viscosity @ 40°C	150 cSt
Flash Point (PMCC) °C	>190
Boiling Point °C	>320
pH (5% in water)	Not applicable
Solubility in Water	Not miscible with water

10. STABILITY AND REACTIVITY

Stability:	Stable under normal conditions of use and storage.
Incompatibility:	Avoid contact with strong oxidising agents, strong acids and extremes of temperature.
Decomposition:	Thermal decomposition can lead to the formation of a variety of compounds, the precise nature of which will depend on the prevailing conditions. Combustion will generate smoke and hazardous gases including oxides of carbon and sulphur.

11. TOXICOLOGICAL INFORMATION

Ingestion:	Low order of acute oral toxicity. May cause nausea, vomiting and diarrhoea. Risk from aspiration into lungs after accidental swallowing or vomiting of ingested material, which can result in severe pulmonary problems.
